RACE WAR ON THE WAY

HURD
A career-long champion of the multi-racial society, he is now getting frightened of its looming consequences

Report to Government warns of coming inner-city mayhem

SO NOW IT'S OFFICIAL!

No less a personage than the Home Secretary, Douglas Hurd, has recently been forced to admit what nationalists have known, and been predicting, for years. It is reported that, in a secret minute submitted to the Prime Minister and other Cabinet colleagues, Hurd has warned of the imminent threat of what can only be described as a race war.

This admission, which even now Hurd and the Tory Government of which he is a member clearly would like to play down and keep from the British public as far as possible, follows many years of bland and soothing soft soap, if not outright lies, from establishment quarters on the subject of race and immigration and the consequences for Britain of the multi-racial experiment. For years, our ruling politicians at Westminster — both Labour and Tory — have tried to minimise the size of the race problem which their policies have created in our country. They have lied about almost every aspect of the multi-racial 'new order' which they have set up in Britain, from the number of non-Whites here (of whom they have been claiming for the last 15 years that there are no more than 2½ million) to the racial aspects of crime in the inner cities. They even tried to deny that the riots that swept the country in 1981 were racial in character — in spite of the fact that all of these riots were centred in racial minority-dominated ghetto areas.

ATTEMPT TO SILENCE OPPOSITION

To prevent the truth being told, Mrs. Thatcher's Government has tightened up the race laws, making them even more tyrannical so as to crush opposition to its race policy. In 1986 the Government launched an unprecedented wave of prosecutions against patriots under the race acts for speaking out against the evil consequences of multi-racialism for Britain, including the threat of outright race war. Some of these patriots, including the editor of this paper, were imprisoned for publishing these warnings.

But now the Tory Home Secretary himself is apparently being forced to admit the reality of the danger. This concession to the truth about the hideous nightmare which he and his colleagues and Westminster are bringing down on our country through their deliberate policies of multi-racialism was wrung from Mr. Hurd as a result of pressure from chief constables up and down Britain, who are worried about growing inter-ethnic strife in their areas.

The fear is that Britain is currently threatened with a new wave of riots on the Broadwater Farm scale — with the flashpoint this time being the growing clashes between ethnic minority groups themselves. Outbreaks of racial conflict of this kind, it is reported, could lead to a new wave of inner-city riots on large council estates and in crowded residential areas. As should be obvious, it will be our own British policemen and ordinary British people resident in such areas who will stand to be the first victims caught in the crossfire.

It is being said that Sikhs and Hindus in Birmingham are now coming into conflict over events in India. In the notorious St. Paul's area of Bristol, the scene of Britain's first major inner city race riots back in 1980, West Indians are reported to be at the throats of Asians, whose dominance of local businesses has led to tensions which erupted into two nights of violence last autumn. In Southall (West London), clashes between Moslems and Sikhs have resulted from attempts by Moslem youths to date Sikh girls. And in the nightmarish North Peckham area of South London, dominated by Afro-Caribbean drug-dealers, and a virtual 'no-go' area for police (except in large numbers), there is also said to be serious potential for future trouble.

In addition, Leeds, Wolverhampton, the Moss Side area of Manchester and North Kensington (which includes Notting Hill) are also being mentioned as possible trouble spots.

NO CAUSE FOR SURPRISE

If the great 'multi-racial' experiment ends up in this kind of chaos and mayhem, the only thing we could find at all surprising would be that anyone should be surprised. Britain's post-war politicians have thrown this country open to settlement by millions of immigrants from all over Africa, Asia and the Caribbean, immigrants with a way of life totally foreign to our own. It is inevitable that such a policy should lead to tension, boiling up into full-blooded conflict. Nowhere in the world has multi-racialism produced social harmony. Why on earth should it do so here?

By stating this truth, we are not blaming the members of the ethnic minority communities themselves — for they are as much the victims of the policy as are our own people; the blame should be placed squarely where it belongs — with government. And that means Labour and Tory governments alike.

As for the indigenous British people — our people — if they themselves do not do their duty and take up the responsibility for ending this multi-racial nightmare — which it is still within their power to do — then it will be their fate to suffer the appalling consequences that will surely ensue.

HURD'S APPALLING RECORD

It is indeed ironic to hear that Douglas Hurd, no less, is now sounding a warning about the trouble to come from multi-racialism — for he has done more than most politicians to promote and encourage the very source of that trouble. Hurd is a negrophile liberal of the very wettest kind. As Margaret Thatcher's Home Secretary, he is one of the leading contemporary architects of Britain's multi-racial disaster.

Earlier this year, Hurd had seized the occasion of the 20th anniversary of Enoch Powell's 1968 Birmingham speech — in which he (Powell) had warned that coloured immigration would lead to a bloodbath in Britain — to proclaim to a Tory audience that Powell had been "proved wrong by events." In a shameful exhibition of ethnic grovelling, Hurd then went on to crow triumphantly about how ethnic minority elements were gaining more and more power and wealth in Britain.

Hurd predicts summer of city race riots

by Jamie Dettmer Political Correspondent

MRS THATCHER has been warned by Mr Hurd, Home Secretary, in a secret Cabinet minute, to expect a "hot summer" of Broadwater Farm-style riots in London, Birmingham and Bristol.

Mr Hurd said the riots are likely to be precipitated by violence between minority ethnic groups on large council estates and in crowded residential areas.

His warning came after a meeting last month between chief constables from metropolitan areas and Sir Clive Whitmore, Permanent Secretary at the Home Office.

Sparkbrook constituency of Mr Hattersley, Labour's deputy leader, where police fear recent clashes between Sikhs and Hindus over events in India could erupt into full-scale confrontation.

groups is as much a problem as white discrimination against blacks.

Mr Hurd's report does not put forward a plan to prevent the expected violence. He is convinced, according to Home Office sources, that quick action by the police can stop any riots from escalating.

Since 1981 and 1983 police riot tactics have improved dramatically. Hastily gathered dustbin lids have given way to body armour, flame-proof overalls and fire-resistant shields.

Plastic bullets, tear gas and armoured Land Rovers similar to those used in Ulster are also

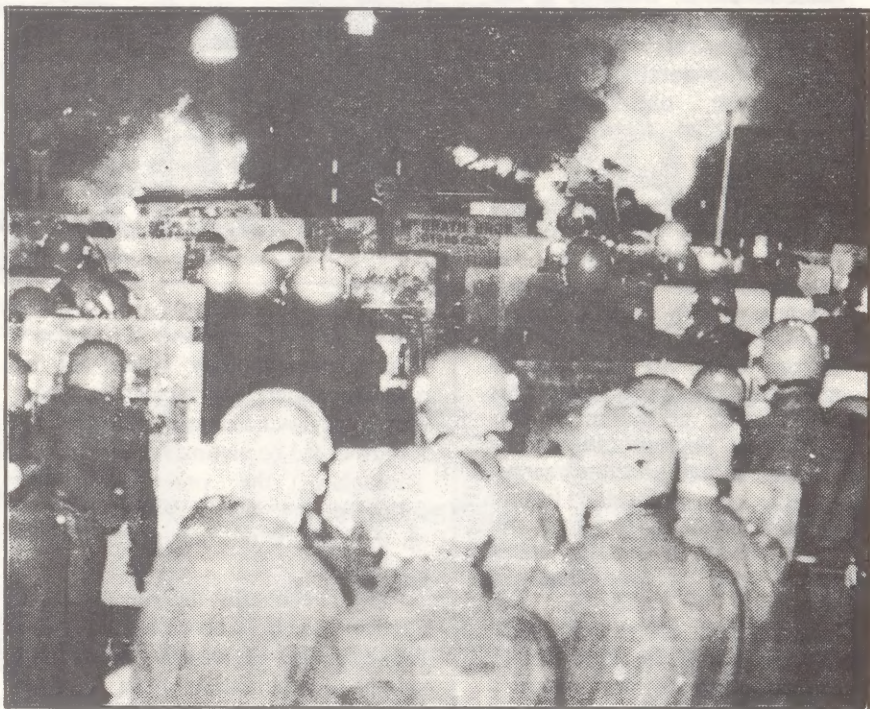

HOME SECRETARY EATS HIS WORDS The tell-tale report in The Daily Telegraph last month

If Hurd's latest warning of ethnic mayhem is anything to go by, he clearly is not now quite so confident that the race-war predictions of Powell and others have been discredited, or that the entrenchment of Afro-Asians in our country will not end up in bloodshed. But what solution does he, as the minister responsible for law and order, actually propose?

The answer is: in effect, none at all. Hurd just passes the buck onto the police, who, he just hopes, may be able to prevent the feared rioting, as and when it arises, getting too far out of

Are we now to see a repeat of this bloodbath?

NEW THREAT FROM AMERICA

EVER SINCE Britain was reduced by her political leaders to the status of a virtual colony of the United States, these politicians have spared no effort to bind our country ever more thoroughly in this subservient relationship.

The slavishness of Britain's rulers towards the regime in Washington and the cosmopolitan financiers who are the real powers behind it has never been greater than today. Mrs. Thatcher and the Tories have seen to it that a huge part of British industry has been sold off to foreigners, much of this falling under transatlantic ownership and control — a process which had, of course, been going on for many decades before.

The Thatcher Tories have bound British defence policy to America more thoroughly, also, than any of their predecessors, reducing us to unparalleled dependence on US military technology. In Ulster, an integral part of the United Kingdom, Mrs. Thatcher has allowed Washington to dictate the betrayal of our fellow British subjects — as is implicit in the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

DUKAKIS
Is he Greek or Jewish?

Perhaps on account of this servility, Britain has always been the first country this side of the Atlantic to fall under the influence of the most diseased political, social and cultural trends to get hold of America. And it is Britain that has then tended so to infect all the other countries of both Europe and the English-speaking world.

Now a new threat has arisen in the States. This is represented in the person of the Democratic contender for the presidency, Governor Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts. Dukakis is the living, breathing, walking, talking embodiment of every single degenerate, left-wing, pro-minority, anti-white and internationalist trend imaginable.

As State Governor, this 'Democrat' has demonstrated his 'democracy' by inflicting on the ordinary white folk of Massachusetts a programme worthy of the most way-out elements of our own 'loony left' Labour Party. He has imposed crushing taxation to finance his pro-minority schemes. He has sought to deprive law-abiding citizens of their private firearms, which, in America (where violent armed crime as yet still exceeds that of Britain), are in many parts of the country a necessity for effective self-defence and personal security. He has favoured abortion on demand. And he has pushed a 'Gay and Lesbian Civil Rights Bill', which would make it

YES, WHITES GET HARASSED TOO!

FROM TIME TO TIME it suits Mrs. Thatcher to pose in public as some sort of 'champion' of Britain's white people against the multi-racialist tyranny that the ruling establishment (of which she is herself a part) has imposed on our country.

Thus, just recently, the Prime Minister saw fit to go through the motions of taking up the cause of an elderly white couple who were the victims of especially outrageous treatment at the hands of Camden Council, in North London, a typical inner-city Labour borough run exclusively for the benefit of racial minorities by the usual gang of red agitators and alien 'black power' fanatics in control of the local Labour Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Buczkowski, whose case was earlier reported in this paper, had suffered years of noise and intimidation at the hands of black neighbours.

When they complained directly to these neighbours about the level of the din from radios played at full volume, Mr. Buczkowski (72) was attacked with an iron bar and his wife (60) left bleeding in the gutter after being hit with a heavy metal bucket.

NO 'RACIAL ATTACK'

Camden Council had long been making a public song and dance over so-called 'racial harassment', but when the Buczkowskis brought their own plight to the council's attention they

How little real effort the Prime Minister must in fact have put into the matter was indicated by the derisory sum of £250 which the council eventually paid the couple. The latter had suffered appalling harassment from their black neighbours for 11 years. Their level of compensation works out at about 44p per week!

Meanwhile, Camden Council arrogantly continues to maintain that this payment is "sufficient," obviously realising that Mrs. Thatcher's intervention was purely a political stunt.

Why indeed should anyone suppose otherwise since, in all her nine years of office, the Prime Minister and her Tory Government have not lifted a little finger to curb the anti-white tyranny in Britain, let alone abolish it? In fact, it is under Mrs. Thatcher's rule that that tyranny has grown to its present proportions.

OF ONE MIND

Both Mrs. Thatcher and the grubby and vicious little reds who now run so many of our boroughs may appear to disagree on many other matters, but they are all at one in being dyed-in-the-wool multi-racialists. The differing party labels — Tory and Labour — do not represent any real difference in policy over race at all, beyond the quite trivial questions of method by which race-mixing is to be forced on the when an immigrant who may happen to be ill-disposed towards his or her white neighbours should think it possible to get away with any outrage against them — as obviously assumed by the attackers of Mr. and Mrs. Buczkowski?

INTOLERABLE NOISE

In one recently reported case, an ordinary, respectable British family, the Hodgkinsons from Ruislip, Middlesex, had been subjected to two years of intolerable noise from their Asian neighbour, Mrs. Purveen Rashid. Mrs. Rashid would go out to work at night leaving her radio on at full blast, playing Asian music from Radio Southall or Radio 2.

When the Hodgkinsons finally took Mrs. Rashid to court, she tried to countercharge them for 'racial harassment', alleging, among other things, that Mr. Hodgkinson had "master-minded a burglary" at her house, and that the Hodgkinsons' mentally and physically handicapped son had "kicked her door." In fact when Mrs. Rashid had first moved next door to the Hodgkinsons the latter had tried to be as neighbourly as possible, but had been continually rebuffed. In court, however, Mrs. Rashid claimed that Mr. Hodgkinson had told her that "no Black would ever live there."

It was additionally revealed that Mrs. Rashid had engaged in other anti-social behaviour. She had lunched topless in her back garden and fitted steel security shutters on all her windows. The whole story reads almost as if she had in fact deliberately contrived each one of these outrages and lies against the white family next door so as to provoke some action from them which would in turn give her the opportunity to charge them with 'racial harassment'. Possibly taking her cue from the anti-white bias of Britain's multi-racialist rulers, she believed she could thereby get sufficient pressure applied to drive them from their home.

Whatever may have been her motive, however, on this occasion the 'racial harassment' line adopted by Mrs. Rashid and her counsel, Ajmalul Hossain, was just too incredible for the court. Judge Barr ruled in favour of the Hodgkinsons. But even this did not stop Mrs. Rashid renewing her din against her neighbours pending the actual serving of the injunction.

Meanwhile, no doubt Mrs. Thatcher is satisfied that her own typically empty professions of 'concern' for the sufferings of the Buczkowskis will have conned many ordinary gullible British people into believing that she is in some way 'on their side' against the multi-racialists. The ongoing victimisation of Whites, which our enemies are so self-confidently aggressive in applying, gives the lie to this. Those enemies know that Mrs. Thatcher will not act to stop them, whatever words she might utter for effect. It will take an order of leadership very different from hers to put an end to this tyranny against the British people.

Mrs. Ruth Hodgkinson and her daughter Susan: Two years of hell from Asian neighbour's radio were told that, according to Camden's official policy, they could not be considered victims of racial harassment or a racial attack because only Blacks or Asians could be victims of such things! Throughout the proceedings that followed, the council was completely on the side of the old couple's black assailants.

When eventually the Buczkowskis' attackers had been brought to court and found guilty of assault, the couple sought compensation from Camden Borough Council. At this point, Mrs. Thatcher saw fit to make a slight public show of supporting the Buczkowskis' claim.

British people, and whether the pace of this enforcement should be faster or slower. About the final objective there is no dispute at all.

For this reason the Tory Government pretty much allows the tyrants of the race-mixing lobby — whether at the level of the viciously anti-white, taxpayer-funded 'Commission for Racial Equality' or at that of the left-wing local authorities — an almost completely free hand to push Whites around. This being so, is it really anything to wonder at that Whites are coming to be seen as so many helpless victims who can be kicked at will?

Is it really any surprise, for example,

SUCCESSFUL NORTHERN MEETINGS

JOHN TYNDALL, British National Party leader, made a short tour of the North of England at the end of July, addressing well-attended meetings in Manchester (July 29th) and Leeds (July 30th). This was the beginning of a series of nationwide tours by Tyndall aimed at establishing closer contact with BNP units. Mr. Tyndall has for the past year and a half been heavily occupied with work in connection with the production of his book The Eleventh Hour. Now that this work is completed, he is much more free to resume his full range of duties in organising the BNP, and during the coming year will be seen extensively 'in the field', advising and encouraging local activists everywhere and initiating new activity campaigns.

STRESS ON INITIATIVE

The Manchester meeting was attended by just under 40 people, mainly local. The meeting was also addressed by National Organiser David Bruce. The two speakers laid great emphasis on the need for branches — and individuals — to take greater initiative in carrying out activities — a kind of perestroika, in which people at local level look to themselves to promote the party and bring its message to the people, instead of waiting above for orders and initiatives from above.

The two leaders also spoke of the need vastly to expand the distribution of party literature and of sales of British Nationalist.

In both his Manchester and Leeds speeches Mr. Tyndall spoke of the need for every nationalist to live his or her life as far as possible in accordance with the ideological beliefs of the party, and not just in those areas that might be described as 'political'. It was important, he said, to listen only to white and European music and to bring up children along the same lines. He also stressed the importance of physical fitness and healthy living, of tidiness of person and dignified conduct at all times. Nothing harms the cause of nationalism more, he said, than for human dross to be recruited into the movement and thereafter to be allowed to project an image of nationalism associated with 'punks', 'rockers', football hooligans and pansies. The upbringing of children should aim at producing real men and real women, not 'unisex' creatures of the kind in present media fashion.

The Leeds meeting, which was attended by about 65-70 people, demonstrated how the party has enjoyed a recent resurgence in Yorkshire after a few months of losing its way. The success of the meeting once again made a mockery of the claims recently made in the Zionist Searchlight magazine that the BNP was disintegrating in the region.

At both meetings Mr. Tyndall's book The Eleventh Hour was on display for the first time and sales were very brisk.

Austin cars: murdered by order of the EEC

THE RECENT DEAL whereby the Rover motor group, the car-making division of the former British Leyland, has been taken over by British Aerospace stinks to high heaven.

The very fact that the Thatcher Government had a close hand in arranging the deal should have alerted us to the probability that the deal would not have results beneficial to British manufacturing industry. And so it has proved.

Shortly before the deal was signed and sealed, under the approving eye of Industry Minister Lord Young, it was reported that objections to it had been voiced by the Common Market bureaucracy. As the deal was between two British companies, the EEC bureaucrats should have been told to keep their noses out of the affair, as it was not their business. However, Lord Young, instead of doing this, dutifully listened to what the EEC bosses had to say and subsequently emerged from the discussion proudly announcing that a formula had been reached that was 'acceptable' to them.

What was the objection of the Eurocrats to the original merger arrangement? It was that it had not been carried out in strict accordance with the rules of the international 'free market', under which foreign firms would have been given the opportunity to make a bid to take over Rover. In this connection General Motors and Volkswagen were mentioned as interested parties.

In fact, had either GM or Volkswagen taken over Rover it would mean that the last remaining British volume car manufacturer would have passed under foreign control — this already being the status of the Ford, Vauxhall and Talbot firms in this country.

So what formula was eventually adopted by which EEC consent to the Rover/BAe deal was obtained? We soon found out when we heard the future strategy to be followed by Rover in consequence of the merger.

AUSTIN TO DIE

It was announced that Rover's long-term plan was to concentrate solely on 'up-market' models. In due course the great name of Austin, which throughout this century has been synonymous with British motor manufacturing, was to disappear — and with it the last vestige of any British-owned volume car-making capacity.

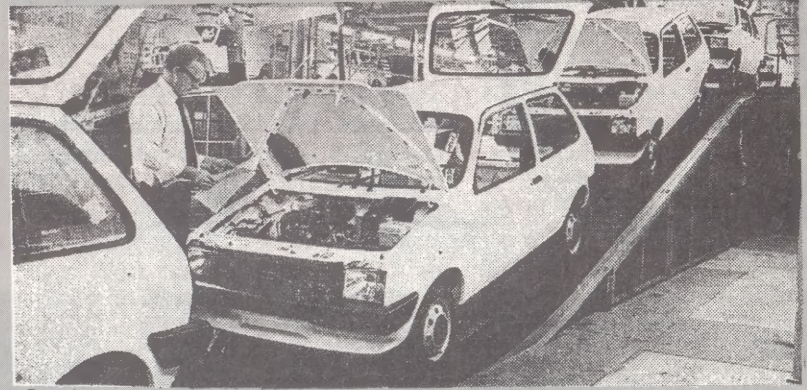

When this policy comes into effect, it will mean that any motorist in Britain who wishes to buy a car at the average man's price will either have to purchase an imported model or, at the best, a model made in Britain by a foreign-owned company.

It will also mean that huge lay-offs will occur in the factories of what was formerly British Leyland, with some of those factories closing down completely. Cowley has been mentioned as one of these.

There is no doubt whatever that EEC agreement to the Rover/BAe deal was obtained only by assurance that this would be Rover's policy. It means, in effect, that Austin cars are going to be killed off — by order of the EEC, and with the craven compliance of this so-called 'British' Government.

We have said it many times before and we say it again. It is the clear policy of the Thatcher Government — though not one stated explicitly — to murder a substantial part of British manufacturing industry — and with that limited part allowed to remain being very largely owned and controlled by foreign capital. In the new 'world economic order' in which the Thatcher Tories believe, there will be little place for Britain as a manufacturing nation. It is supposed that we are going to earn our living as bankers, financiers and insurance brokers to the rest of the world — all 56 million of us!

AUSTIN CARS
The Government is allowing them to be killed off to please the Common Market

We have only one word for this policy. The word is TREASON. Treason against Britain and treason against the British worker.

NATIONALISM THE ONLY WAY

We repeat what we have said many times before: the only way to ensure prosperity for this country and full employment for the British people is a policy of ECONOMIC NATIONALISM.

This must mean that:-

- (1) Britain must get out of the EEC.
- (2) All British industry must be British-owned and the decisions concerning its future made in this country.
- (3) This British industry must be protected by trade barriers against foreign imports and all major items of manufactured goods used in Britain made in Britain.

Until that day comes and this policy is put into effect, British industry is going to continue to waste away.

THE B.B.C. is at it again! With its attempt to distort the Gibraltar shooting incident fresh in memory, we now find that the Corporation's programme-makers are seizing upon the fact that this year marks the 400th anniversary of the defeat of the Spanish Armada to turn history around and claim that it was not a victory for the English at all. At the same time, the events of that epoch have been depicted in such a way that the conflict appears to be one in which Elizabeth's England no more had right on its side than did its Spanish adversary!

This was the message of the three-part docudrama broadcast during the first week of this month. The very fact that the docudrama was made with the co-operation of the Spanish ensured, of course, that it would not be allowed to serve as a stimulus to English (and British) national pride. Sir Francis Drake, naturally, came out of the film with prestige diminished, as did his sovereign Queen Bess. The England of the time, far from being 'Merrie', was portrayed as a bitterly divided country, with the sufferings of Catholics given special prominence and these shown praying for an Armada victory. Her captains Frobisher and Hawkins, like Drake, were shown as mere ruffians.

Philip II of Spain, on the other hand, emerged, in the words of Peter Paterson, writing in The Daily Mail, as "an heroic and saintly character, driven by his intense religious faith."

As for the destruction of the Armada itself, the emphasis of the film was that this was caused, not by the skill and heroism of the English seamen, but by bad luck, bad strategy and bad weather.

RED COLLABORATOR

One of the Spanish collaborators used by the BBC to make the film was the present descendant of the Duke of Medina Sidonia, the Armada commander. This was a lady known as the 'Red Duchess', a lifelong crusader for communist causes. That such a person would bring an honest and objective approach to the making of such a production was unlikely in the extreme, but that did not seem to bother the BBC team who used her. After all, are they not on the same side?

Of course, the Spanish and British versions of what happened 400 years ago this month are bound to be different. That does not really matter too much. All nations' histories are bound to be slanted so as to stimulate national pride. If Britain decides now to depart from this rule, we can be sure that other nations will not — and that will give them the psychological edge over us. But national pride is of course, to the BBC, one of the world's deadly sins. It must be eradicated by every device available, whether the latter be fact or fiction. We will probably never know exactly what happened to the Armada when it sailed into the English Channel, how much of its destruction was to the credit of Drake's men and how much to other factors. It is best to let history of this vintage rest as it is, with respective national myths untampered with. We do not have to change ours, or the Spanish theirs, for our two nations to get along amicably today.

It would of course be nice to think that the BBC was re-examining this event of history out of a passionate and genuine dedication to the cause of absolute historical accuracy and truth. Perhaps when it decides to re-examine some of the myths of World War II it will demonstrate that this is really so!

ENGLISH SHIPS INTERCEPT THE ARMADA
Lucky for us there was no BBC in those days; otherwise we would certainly have lost!

Great reception for Tyndall book

SALES of John Tyndall's book, The Eleventh Hour (reviewed last month) are exceeding all expectations, and the book has had a tremendous reception among patriots everywhere. A second edition is now being planned, much earlier than originally thought necessary. In particular, sales of the hardback edition are much higher than was contemplated when the first print run was planned. Soon those placing orders for this edition may have to wait until a further run has been completed.

A little confusion has arisen over the price of postage for the book. Last month we announced that postage for the paperback edition was £1.60. This was an error, £1.80 being the correct figure when the cost of packaging is taken into account. This price is higher than the normal postage charge made by the BNP Book Service because the latter is based on the average cost of dispatching orders when these, as is normal, are for several books in one package. Most of the orders coming in for The Eleventh Hour are for this book on its own. BNP Book Service will honour all orders at the stated postage price of one-eighth the value of the order, but this will involve a slight loss. It would be appreciated if all those making orders send money to cover postage and packing in accordance with the charges of £2.20 for the hardback copy and £1.80 for the paperback.

YOUR LETTERS

Sir, — I am in full agreement with your views on the policy of allowing coloured people to settle in this country. I am totally baffled by the attitude of the white people here who actively become the upholders of the 'rights' of the Blacks in Britain (no longer Great Britain) by becoming race relations officers, and so on. I feel they are traitors to the British Race.

There are many aspects of your party I agree with, just as there are aspects with which I disagree. But on the whole I feel that the country could only be a better place with the BNP's hand on the tiller. I feel that you should be doing more to make known the party's policies on the economy and its proposals for restoring law and order. When I talk to my colleagues at work about the BNP, they only seem to think about the race issue — not realising that you have other policies as well.

DAVID E. BROWN
Bolton, Lancs.

Sir, — How right you are to conclude the article on the pestiferous faggots in our midst by the assertion that we nationalists are capable of waging the real moral crusade that is needed in this country. Such a crusade will be intrinsic to the task of cleansing our country of the accumulated muck and filth of liberal democracy that Labour and Conservative governments alike have allowed and encouraged to befall society.

Your closing recital of the characteristics essential to the renewed national community in a nationalist-governed Britain leads me to ask why the BNP doesn't catalogue the main points of its policy necessary to restore our British heritage in a future number of British Nationalist.

BNP activists in Ulster

OVER THREE DAYS, from July 11th to July 13th, a British National Party activist team of 15 men from London, Birmingham, Liverpool and Glasgow went to Ulster to introduce the party in the province and show its support for the loyal British majority in their determined and courageous struggle to preserve their British heritage in the face of republican terror and Westminster betrayal. In particular, the BNP team aimed to affirm that the struggle for survival of loyal Ulster folk is in fact part and parcel of the struggle for the national survival of Britain and the British people as a whole. The message put out by the party in the province was that Sinn Fein and the IRA were ultimately part of the same alien and hostile international forces as are aiming to subvert and destroy Britain on the mainland, but operating under a slightly different guise.

In addition, it was pointed out that the Westminster politicians are equally in the process of betraying the whole of the British people to their enemies, whether those enemies were the Irish republican gangsters of Londonderry or the 'black power' gangsters of London, and that it is time for Ulster loyalists and British Nationalists to close ranks.

During the course of the loyalist parades along the Lisburn Road in Belfast on July 12th the BNP team distributed many thousands of leaflets bearing this message to the onlookers lining the pavements — all of them decent and patriotic loyal Ulster folk who responded with courtesy and interest. In the field at Edenderry, a few miles from Central Belfast, where the loyalist parades terminated, a paper sale was held at which some 200 copies of British Nationalist (carrying the same message of support for loyal Ulster) were sold.

On July 13th the BNP unit leafleted the loyalist Rathcoole Estate north of Belfast. The reception from local people was notably friendly.

Members of the BNP team were particularly grateful for the generous hospitality extended to them by the loyalist people of Belfast among whom they stayed and who unstintingly provided bed and board — and friendship. The tremendous courage and fighting spirit, in very adverse conditions, of these fine Ulster folk is an inspiring example to Britons everywhere.

SCOTTISH activists of the BNP made a strong showing at an Orange gathering on July 9th at Balloch, on the banks of Loch Lomond. NEW THREAT FROM AMERICA illegal for normal people to 'discriminate' against queers.

On top of this, Dukakis is a fanatical supporter of Israel. The power of Zionist Jews over the Government of the United States is such that America's national interests have been seriously compromised by support for the Jewish State. Zionists' power in US politics is such that it is hard for anyone to get elected to any office who is in any way against Israel. Dukakis, who belongs to a Greek Orthodox Church, has a Jewish wife who is militantly pro-Israel. It is further suggested in some quarters that Dukakis himself may be of Jewish, rather than Greek, ethnic origin.

As a presidential candidate, Dukakis has gone out of his way to ingratiate himself with the black candidate Jesse Jackson and his supporters, since defeating Jackson for the Democratic nomination. Dukakis has promised the Blacks that, having once got his hands on the levers of power, he would use America's vast resources in a new international offensive against the world's white people under the guise of 'anti-racism', starting with South Africa but extending to every other white nation on earth, including Britain.

Britain itself, which has been reduced to almost total servitude to the US by her political leaders, would be extremely vulnerable to the kind of pressures exerted against her by a Dukakis government in America, and in the face of such pressure it is unlikely that Mrs. Thatcher would show much inclination to resist. This could have disastrous repercussions in respect of our policies in Northern Ireland, towards South Africa and in the inner cities of England where the race problem festers as a result of the lamentably failed multi-racial experiment.

All this points to one thing: that there is now stronger reason than ever for Britain to stage its own declaration of independence — from America.

hand. He does not propose in any way to take steps to end the cause of the trouble, which is multi-racialism itself. On the contrary, in his eyes it appears that, however appalling its consequences, the multi-racial society is sacred and unalterable; and we, the British people, must just submit to whatever atrocities it may lead to.

The remedy lies in the British people's hands. It is high time they stopped whining about the consequences of the multi-racial society and saying: "We don't like it, but what can you do about it?" Something can be done about it — if enough people care sufficiently to take the initiative and work for a change. We nationalists have offered a vehicle for the achievement of such a change. With the active help of the masses of British people who want to take their country back, we can — and will — succeed!

Quote of the month

A strange idea is abroad that by getting together the fallible nations will become infallible. Nations individually do wrong; a collectivity of nations will necessarily do right: such is the assumption.
